

Construction Project Planning Manager
From c£60k + excellent benefits
Central London

The London Underground Projects Directorate is responsible for the successful delivery of London Underground Limited (LUL) projects and those of the PPP Infraco contractors, PFI suppliers, or other third party suppliers. These are truly massive endeavours - over the next nine years the value of the projects runs in to £billions - and they will be delivered by teams of the very best programme and project management professionals in the business. This is your opportunity to be one of them.

We are currently performing a £300m programme of work at Tottenham Court Road Underground Station. Already one of the busiest stations on the network it serves around 150,000 customers a day and by 2017it's expected this number will exceed 200,000.

Join us in the role of Construction Project Planning Manager, Tottenham Court Road and you will take specific responsibility for the evaluation of the methodology and construction programmes submitted by the contractor under the NEC3 contract. More generally, you'll assume responsibility for the delivery of viable project or multi-project plans developed by your own team and by contractors.

For this career-defining senior management role it is essential that you are highly experienced in working on large, complex, safety focused and regulated construction projects, leading and managing a range of major project plans delivered by multiple contractors. To be successful you must have proven experience in multi disciplined projects (heavy civil, tunnelling, M&E and rail) with a good understanding of construction methods, production rates and sequencing. Ideally you will have worked within a contracting organisation on major contracts c£100m+ and at this level extensive knowledge of Critical Path Method (CPM) planning techniques and Earned Value Management methodology are a given. Experience in operational stations will enhance your application.

In return for your skills we offer not only one of the best reward and benefits packages in the market, but also the chance to deliver some of the most significant, high-profile and career-defining civil infrastructure projects anywhere in Europe.
